In similar fashion, the institutions that make up the Consortium have been selected for the unique contributions they can make to Kuwait in securing payment of the Unpaid Awards:

- The Albright Group's team of international negotiators and policy experts is led by former U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine K. Albright. Secretary Albright brings to the Consortium unique experience and political access, and Carol Browner of the Albright Group has unparalleled environmental expertise. The Albright Group will engage senior leadership at the United Nations and in key states other than the U.S. Government, including permanent members of the U.N. Security Council.
- Nexgen Financial Solutions, indirectly owned by the Governments of France and Singapore, is one of the leading financial engineering teams in the world, considered a cutting edge financial boutique, and one of the few groups capable of the structuring effort required to monetize the Unpaid Awards.
- BNP Paribas, the leading European bank in oil structured finance, was also the leading financial institution in the UN oil-for-food program, having access to many of the potential purchasers of the Unpaid Awards and strong relationships within Iraq's oil industry.
- The Carlyle Group, a private equity team, has earned its reputation by successfully consummating deals at the intersection of politics and finance, with its roster of political stars, including, among others, former U.S. Secretary of Defense Frank Carlucci, former British Prime Minister John Major, and until recently former U.S. President George Bush.
- Coudert Brothers LLP, America's oldest international law firm, provides leading edge expertise in the various financing and sovereign debt issues that will confront the Consortium, and particular legal expertise in the UNCC awards process and the awards themselves.
- Emerging Markets Partnership, an AIG affiliate, led by Moen Qureshi, former Senior Vice President of the World Bank, and former Prime Minister of Pakistan, and Don Roth, former Vice President and Treasurer of the World Bank, bring expertise in emerging markets investments, and have a team currently looking at opportunities in Iraq, and insider's access to multilateral international financial institutions, such as the World Bank.
